

camera

Joshua Freiwald

These pages of Rags are copyrighted by Baron Wolman and the authors, and cannot be reproduced without permission.

Joshua Freiwald is a San Francisco free-lance photographer who made his fortune taking architectural pictures. Lately he has turned his lens on other organic-type subjects, one of whom appears here. Writes Freiwald: "Heidi Van Dorff, professional name 'The Jolly Green Giant,' is a topless dancer who lives in a trailer in San Pablo, California, and works in Walnut Creek in a place called the Cat Patch. At least that was her gig when the photos were made. Shortly thereafter, she lost her job, hooked her trailer up to her Cadillac, and went down to Las Vegas, where some agent had promised to get her in one of the shows. That didn't work out, however, so she drove over to LA where the topless business was booming. When I last heard from her she was living in her trailer near Santa Monica. She had recently had her breasts filled with silicone, hoping that the move would improve her chances of finding work. However, she was still having trouble locating steady work, but trying to stick it out in her profession, nonetheless."