

VALENTINES

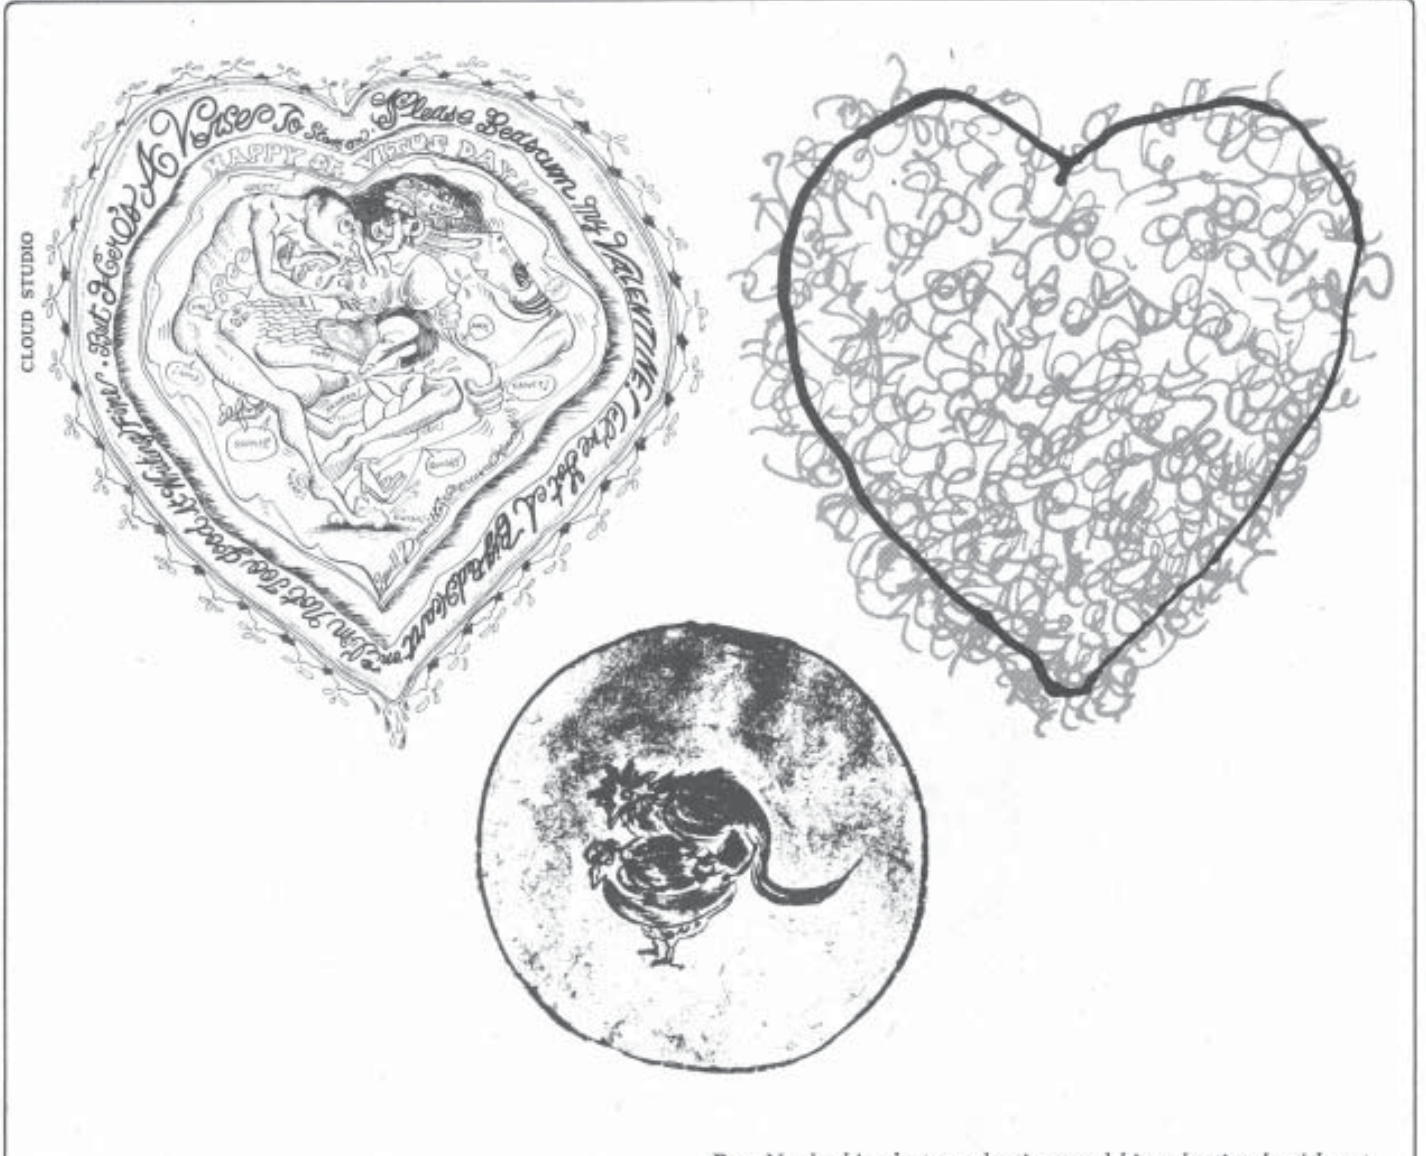

MICHAEL SULLIVAN

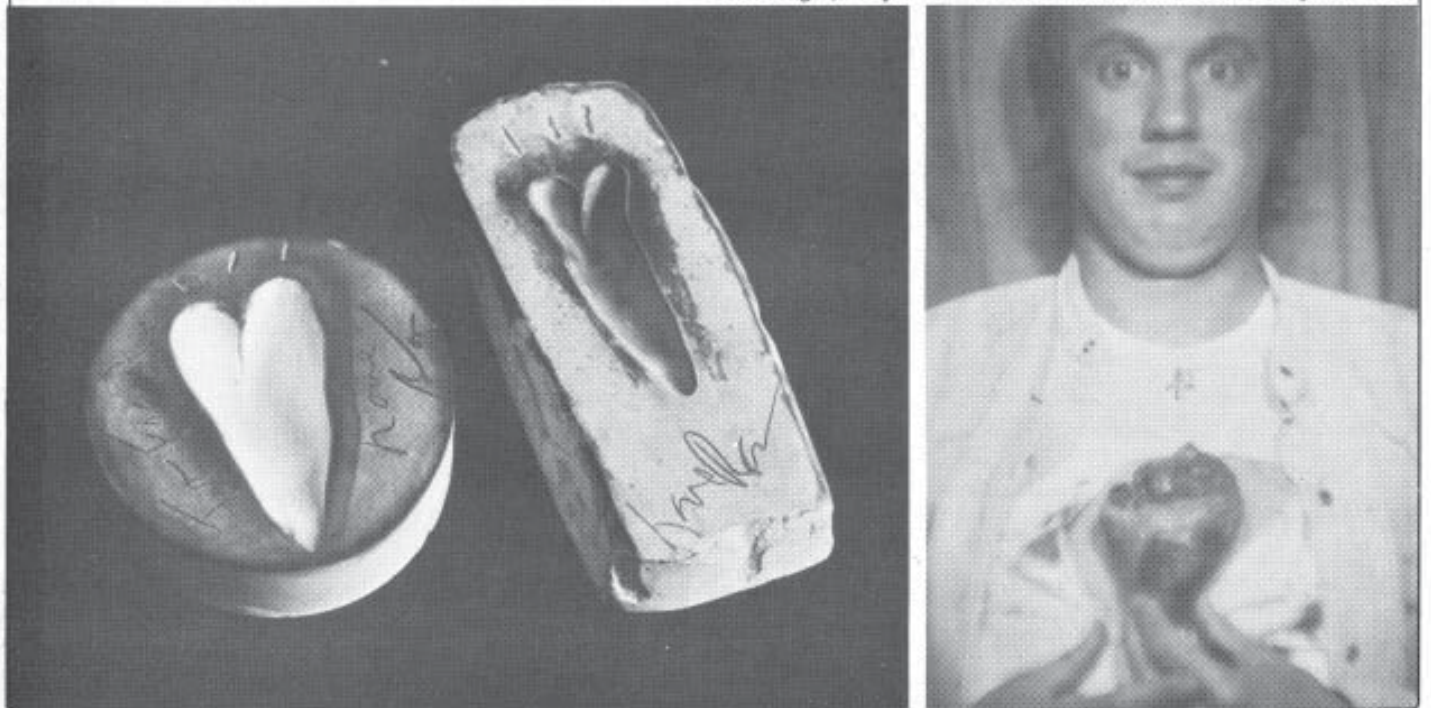

Blushing shyly and kicking the dirt with one toe, we at RAGS modestly present our Valentine's Day portfolio—from us to you, with love. They may not be much like the Valentines you used to give and get at school, but then, you're not 10 years old anymore either. Valentines are about love, and there are many kinds of love. Their sole unified message is: Don't be crabby on Valentine's Day. Love your neighbor as yourself—maybe even better.

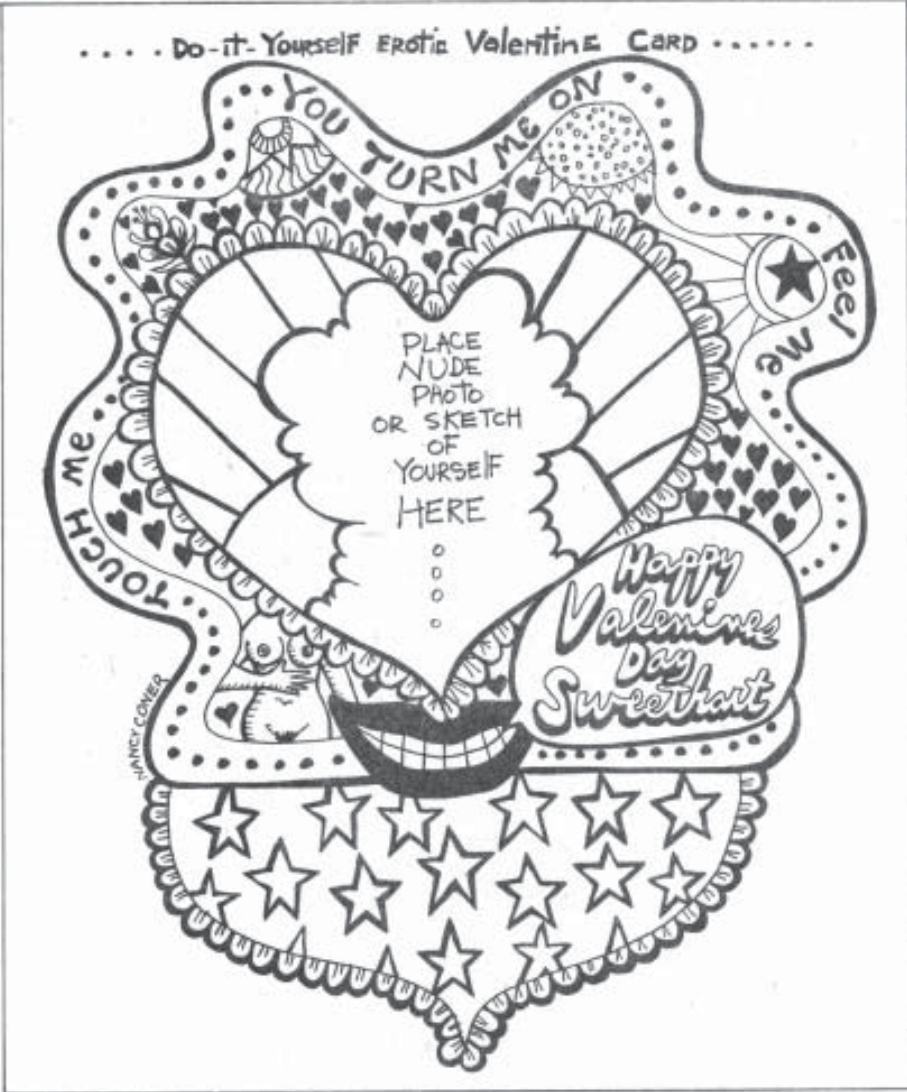

These pages of Rags are copyrighted by Baron Wolman and the authors, and cannot be reproduced without permission.

Ron Nagle, his plaster valentines and his valentine beef heart

These pages of Rags are copyrighted by Baron Wolman and the authors, and cannot be reproduced without permission.

Cynthia Ehrlich's valentine banana slug abed portrait

These pages of Rags are copyrighted by Baron Wolman and the authors, and cannot be reproduced without permission.

FUTZEY NUTZLE, COURTESY OF BALLOON

LEARNING THE JOYS of SEX

